

All Specimen Containers Have Expiration Dates — Expired Collection Containers Can Compromise Quality and are a Cause for Rejection

As part of good general laboratory practices, please inspect your specimen collection and transportation material for the expiration date before collecting specimens.

The images above show examples of expiration dates as they may appear on many types of our collection containers. Clients may contact their LabCorp service representatives to obtain new containers and make arrangements for the return of expired containers.

Please contact your local account representative for more information or visit www.LabCorp.com.